

We're in this together

Enhanced Live Performance

When our first memories come to life we feel enormous in a world that seems small. Later we feed our curiosity with all these new places, all these new faces; we know our world just got bigger and we are okay with it. But as we grow old, our world turns into a black void of space that it's impossible to see where it starts and where it ends. We realize that nothing will happen if tomorrow we are forgotten, we are just a single soul out there, trying to find something to hold on and avoid the fall.

Are we really on our own?
